Poetry.

BY J. G. WHITTIER. This day two hundred years ago.
The wild grape by the river side.

And tasteless ground-nut trailing low The table of the wood supplied.

Unknown the apples, red and gold.
The blushing tints of peach and pear
The Mirror of the Powmow told
No tale of orchard rare.

Wild as the fruits he scorned to till, These vales the idle fod an trod; Nor knew the glad creative skill, The joy of him who tolls with God.

O nainter of the fruits and flowers!
We thank thee for thy wise designs,
Whereby the e human hands of ours
In nature's garden work with thine.

And, thanks, that from our daily need

The joy of simple faith is borne; That he who smites the summer weed, May trust thee for the Autumn corn. Give fools their gold and knaves their pow Let fortune's bubble rise and fall; Who sows a field, or trains a flower, Or plants a tree is more than all.

For he who blesses most is blest; And God and man shall own his worth Who toils to live at his bequest And added beauty to the earth.

And soon, or late, to all that sow.

The time of harvest shall be given.
The flowers shall bloom, the fruits shall grow
If not on earth, at least in heaven.
